Győr is one of the mostly cultured indusiriál-towns of the Hungarian People' s Republic. The city, which is built at the confluence of the rivers Duna, Rába, and Rábca has 80 000 inhabitants and lies on the halfway of the main-road between Budapest and Wien. The in historical and especially in Baroque-art-works very rich inner-town is practically embraced like a defence-line by the new works of our to-day's life. The Past and the Present dissolve in a very fine harmony, and Győr opens widely out the gates of her treusure-house to the visitors coming here.

Concerning all the tourism- matters is at our guests' disposal willingly
